Sea Ports In Karachi (Page 01)

- The Bandar Gah Karachi is a large deep-sea port operated along with the Arabian Sea coast of Pakistan. Owned by the Ministry of Maritime Affairs and managed by the Karachi Port Trust (KPT), it handles nearly 60% of national shipments.
- Karachi Port is a natural harbour that has been operational since the early 18th century although ancient ports were operated by the local rulers since the 8th century CE. Today, the port sits on 32 kilometres of wharves and docks. The anchorage depth is 16 metres with 41 berths and 8 wharves available for commercial vessels.
- Karachi became an important port under British rule and was home to newly developed facilities used to improve trade. The modern harbour was opened in 1854 off the Pakistan coast but has gradually been integrated into the mainland by way of causeways and bridges. A major reason for the importance of Karachi is its proximity to the Straits of Hormuz and the Suez Canal.
- The port boasts of an annual 65.25 million tons of cargo and 1.56 million TEUs. The port is constructed with an 11 km channel for incoming vessels and 2 zones for berthing- the West and East wharves.

Sea Ports In Karachi (Page 02)

- With a maximum capacity of 75,000 DWT for docking vessels, the wharves comprise 3 liquid cargo berths, shipyards and repair sites, 2 dry docks, and 3 container terminals.
- Karachi International Container Terminal (KICT) on the West wharf is capable of handling Panamax and Post-Panamax vessels along 600 metres of berthing space. The Pakistan International Bult Terminal (PIBT) on the East wharf can process Panamax vessels with an annual capacity of 350,000 TEUs.
- The Al-Hamd International Container Terminal (AICT) operates nearby on the Layari river and does not strictly fall under the port premises. The Harbour also has space for naval and commercial shipbuilding and repair. The facilities include dry docks, construction complexes, steel handling plants, and outfitting zones spread over 70 acres.
- The severe congestion at Karachi Port has led to the construction and development of neighbouring ports such as the Pakistan International Container Terminal, Gwadar Port, and Port Qasim. Korangi Fishing Harbour has been designated to ease the pressure off the Karachi Fishing Harbour, while Ormara Naval Base has taken on naval vessels to free docking space at Karachi.
